Dear Daniel,

I am very pleased that you are returning to work and would wish you well with this.

Unfortunately I am unable to meet you over the next two week due to prior work commitments and annual leave.

The issue that relates to the email that you attach below was formally concluded via the Information Commissioner as you are aware so needs no further discussion. The other breach that you consider has occurred in recent months is that we have lost data cannot be substantiated. as the report that you consider is lost, did not exist by the author that you have named. The student psychologist, whom you thought to be called Kevin, did not write the report, other psychologists employed by Blackheath wrote the report and the student fed this back to you and gave you that report. We also sent you a copy of this report in December. As such, we don't consider that any further breaches have occurred and I do not think that a meeting would be helpful.

Kind regards,

Lynn

Hello,

I've now had my big meeting with work, and you will be pleased to know i have got my job back.

So now I'd like to discuss with you your many failing under the Date Protection Act

We can have this at my house. I am free Monday –Friday for the next two weeks.

Many thanks

Daniel McMorrow.
